Dear Editor,

Please find enclosed our manuscript, entitled "Molecular Epidemiology of Female Lung Cancer," which we request you to consider for publication as a Review Article in Cancers.

Lung cancer is a leading cause of cancer mortality in the world, and the incidence of lung cancer in women has been increasing in recent decades. Furthermore, because the screening of lung cancer is not very effective as yet, clinically applicable molecular markers for early diagnosis are required. There appears to be a difference in characteristics of lung cancer between women and men, primarily in terms of histological types and susceptibility to environmental risk factors. However, due to the confounding effect of smoking and related factors, it is difficult to ascertain whether there is a genuine difference between sexes in terms of the aforementioned factors. Also, among female lung cancer patients, many are non-smokers, a finding that could be explored further to identify alternative carcinogenic mechanisms independent from smoking-related ones. In this paper, we reviewed germ-line genetic polymorphisms and somatic alterations in cancer tissues as host factors, especially those distributed differently between sexes, which may explain clinical differences in lung cancer between the sexes.

This manuscript has not been published elsewhere and is not under consideration by another journal. We have approved the manuscript and agree with submission to Cancers. There are no conflicts of interest to declare.

We believe that the findings of this study are relevant to the scope of your journal and will be of interest to its readership. The manuscript has been carefully reviewed by an experienced editor whose first language is English and who specializes in editing papers written by scientists whose native language is not English.

We look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,

Instructions for Author (Please delete this section before submission)

We have gone through your manuscript in detail and prepared a customized cover letter for you. There may be some information that you need to add to the cover letter. We have inserted some comments in the cover letter for your perusal. Enago will review the cover letter for free (after your changes) under our Manuscript Insurance service or our Question and Answer Service.

Additional Notes:

1) DATE
   Please change the date to the date on which you will submit the paper. Use the British (dd/mm/yy) or the American (mm/dd/yy) format as per the target journal.

2) GRANT
   In case your study is funded by a particular institute or association and you would like to mention this in the cover letter, please add the following sentence.
   "The study was supported by a grant from the [GRANT DETAILS]."

3) CONFLICT OF INTEREST
   In case there is a conflict of interest, please provide the appropriate information in place of "There are no conflicts of interest to declare."
